

New Poetry from Chad Corrigan: “Hidden Mountain Tops”

SMOKE CLOUDS / image by Amalie Flynn

The top of the mountain is hidden.

It looks like a cloud of smoke.

But it's a snow filled cloud.

The map says it's thirty-seven hundred and sixty-nine feet.

The clouds must be about thirty-four hundred.

From their helicopter cockpits

they still look up

dwarfed by the mountain and ceiling.

Small against the storm.
