EACH NIGHT MY MOTHER DIES AGAIN

Each night the phone rings—

Your mother has passed.

Each night I expect to be relieved, but night falls on night.

Each night she is the mother who makes waffles, batter bubbling from the sides of the iron, the mother who squeezes fresh orange juice, and serves soft-boiled eggs in enchanted egg cups. Each night I squint into her face as she carries me over the ocean waves, her arms my raft.

Each night she refills Dr. Zucker's prescriptions for diet pills and valium. Each night she waters her rosebushes with Dewar's. Each night I see her hands shake, her brows twitch. Each night she adds ground glass to the chopped liver, rubbing alcohol to the chopped herring.

Each night she puts a chicken straight on the lit burner without a pot. Each 2:00 a.m., Mrs. Finch from 6G phones—

Sorry to say your mother is naked in the hallway again.

Each night my mother is strapped into her railed bed at Pilgrim State, curled into a fetal position, her hands fisted like claws.

Each night she calls to me from her plain pine coffin, calls me by the name she gave me, the name she hasn't forgotten.

REHAB DAY 1

He hadn't told me, hadn't stopped drinking drank beer in the hallway near recycling where people bring garbage and broken-down boxes he guzzled, and I was here on the other side of the door thinking him sober, reversing redness and the inflammation from an otherwise young and healthy liver and I was sober—how would it help for me to sip a glass of wine while he drank water with our chicken piccata?

My first thought after drop-off was rebellion to pull the cork from a long glass throat and pour full garnet into stemware

I wanted that right again. In my home the right again to not finish a bottle and know it will still be there in the morning

Then I felt a kind of shame

I checked him into a rehab facility and all I could think of was wine to unleash my desire for want drove hours home like a Christmas-morning kid thrashing through ribbons and crinkled paper so soon as it was in sight enrapt and hungry for vice.

He's been in rehab four days now, four days without hands on my body how indulgent that every day I've had hands plying my nerves into delight delight like the tickle and lick of sharing a bed with the same person and when I finally call my dad, my dad who I'd been avoiding telling

I tell him how lonely it was to arrive back home after leaving him there with nurses in their face shields, yellow gowns, and their masks and the globe eyes of his counselor, who stood just back on the sidewalk and my dad says with unintended harshness that he takes back as soon as the truth hits the mouth of his phone: You don't have to tell me that at least he's coming back and I imagine him there alone, barefoot in shorts with a solid color shirt, some sort of mauve, doodling spirals and checker-box patterns at the kitchen table on a yellow legal pad in felt-tipped pen while he talks to me, and I remember how in the month between funeral and stay-at-home, he was well-booked—every day somebody stopped by with a crumb cake. Baked goods multiplied on his countertop: cookies mutated into blondies into muffins into baskets filled mostly with crinkle paper with pears and crackers atop and underneath the suffocation of plastic tied with ribbons. We worked in shifts so he would not be alone, alone where he watched her for months and months and months and months, he danced with her bald in her walker. Oh, how she resisted that walker until she fell over! How there was a friend each day on the calendar for lunch, how we took turns staying the night frying two eggs with toast in the morning—he always ate breakfast—the plate hearkening back to the diner in Waldwick. How he does not have a return.

My call—a child seeking solace from a parent who only understands in the way the child will only know as real in some future hard to materialize in the livingness of abundance and relative youth how he too was young once with a wife who had long hair she permed curly and he would tug on her locks under their blankets. When I say future

I see Jim again, clear-eyed with warm hands playing my rib cage,

The National on in the car as we drive up 95 to some version of our life twenty-four days from right now.

of course the doctor finds a cyst on my left breast uphill from sternum rolling around like a glass marble of course this is the first day he calls of course I cannot tell him this news washed from normal humdrum stress he swims in progress and my secret would not serve him any more than it serves my own malicious asshole cells dense like perennials since puberty of that particular region of course I cannot even examine the terrain of my own human lumps with one arm raised like a branch fingers ambling around suspicion every time I've been terrified I'll find what mom found and it all feels like oatmeal anyhow and he's helpless from there anyhow to distract from my cycle of peering into imagined crystal balls and storylines seeing only the worst, seeing coffins—if he does not know he cannot worry and I cannot put that upon him now make him worry for me while he does so well in there

It's time to take the IUD out.
This is what I think about today, my body doesn't want this preventer centered anymore.

I remember the day it went in: man-doctor's hand inserting copper I winced. He said I know, I know generic bedside assuaging irked my nerves I sharpened back No, no, you actually don't.

And mom came along for support all frail in her bird limbs, climbed broken into a chair next to me at the outpatient place and pain got to the point I needed her hand to squeeze like citrus pulp out of my grip as something external opened me up—

I want to be opened from the inside instead dragged ragged in the riptide of giving birth—

I realized I'd break her frame of softening digits and knuckles of chemo bones if I juiced so I unfelt her skin and took hold of my gown wrung into wrinkles and sweated holes it's only a sheen of thin paper anyway...
When he comes back, he will come back to some levels of absence—and so in turn open space comes back in, to come in like syrup into my hungry self.

His absence heightens hers so this is how I communicate with mom

I feel each breast one by one smushed between a plastic pane and its baseboard goosebumps prickle against machine sounds in a room alone with the rumbling inherited path toward lobular cancer where will my tissue light up a mammogram like a late-summer campfire sparkler?

Today the ultrasound is a shock

The technician skates a roller over my mound and I see with clarity a round black orb

She talks to me lump to lump on the same table she undid her robe years ago except her skin puckered like a citrus punch breast vines weighted by clusters of rotting berries, overripe mine are bright on the doctor's screen netted fibers the rind of a cantaloupe's dry skin I see roadways toward lactation and roadways toward demise and this marble eye from god like an omen is benign has come out as a reminder of how to spend my days.
