

New Poetry by Kevin Honold: “A Brief History of the Spanish Conquest”

RADIANT AS NOON / image by Amalie Flynn

A Brief History of the Spanish Conquest

Tell me again of that fabulous kingdom where a single ear of corn is more than two strong young men can carry, where cotton grows untended, in colors never dreamed of,

to be spun by gorgeous slaves into garments that lie cool as cornsilk against the skin and shine radiant as noon.

How sordid and predictable history can be.
Within sight of the prize but out of ammunition, they lowered three men down the volcano's throat to fetch sulfur for gunpowder.

This

was the vision prefigured in the prophet's eye:
three men curled in a basket peering back across the centuries, their dewy starving faces so desperate with hope as they dissolve in a yellow mist, felons set adrift.

North by west toward the cities of gold, the soldiers in rags walked half-bent with hunger and dysentery, nursing grievous wounds sustained in hit-and-run attacks by moss-troopers talking Choctaw.

Beside the mother of rivers, the horses sickened and died but the soldiers, being less reasonable, proved less destructible.

At disobedient towns they dragged out chopping blocks to punish malefactors and departed in a shower of ash, their legacy a heap of severed hands slowly clutching at flies.

But the much-sought golden cities sank below the horizon like the tall ships of fable. For the Spaniards, the age of miracles ended somewhere in southwest Arkansas. The palaces of silver turned Outlaw Liquor Barns, Triple-X Superstores, the stuff of vision a mustard-colored mix of smoke, dust, emissions from riverside refineries and coal plants along the Mississippi where squadrons of John Deere combines like barn-size locusts roll in drill order over the dry land, half-effaced by squalls of chaff.

At night the fields burn.
Stray flames browse the blackened shoulders of the interstate, crop the stubble beneath the billboards.

In the state park south of Hot Springs I fell asleep in a chair in the heat and woke to a titmouse perched on the toe of my boot with that peculiar weightlessness shared by birds and planets and I searched without hope for my place in the book.

Buzzards killed time there, their shadows slipping across the iron ground like fish in a shallow pool while Time gaped at the spiders that battened on the flies that swarmed the rotten windfall apples.

Tenochtitlan.

At the imperial aviary, we found a pair of every kind of bird in the world:
parrots and finches in profusion, brooding vultures, egrets, ibis is sacramental scarlet.

Seahawks stooped and banked through that hostile truce and we marveled at God's prodigality, His exuberant inventiveness, then piled tinder to burn the thing to the ground.

Flames sheeted over the soaring lattice dome like the fleet shadows of clouds. For a time, the structure smoldered, a hissing wickerwork steaming as it cooled.

Here and there, a bird crashed the skein of ash like a rogue comet bursting the flaming ramparts of the universe.

Charmed in place, we held our breath, beside ourselves, like couriers trapped in a snowglobe, blinded in a tempest of embers, astonished at the work of these hands, the everyday miracle of destruction.

BLACK LACE TREES / *image by Amalie

SOMETHING LIKE NIGHTFALL something, like night falls slow, as if nothing in the world has ever moved but distant hope descending, still ablaze days soften to wonder what else leaves silhouettes these black lace trees fades from me

it is you from my life steadily, quietly as celestial movement

TURNING EVERYTHING AROUND / image
by Amalie Flynn

Praying at the Temple of Forgiveness for Zea Joy, in memoriam

Last Monday you threw yourself, your body, dressed in red chemise, in front of a train.

It was your insatiable hunger for a more tenderhearted world, your husband said at Shiva.

Now no one will get to see what you saw from inside your snow globe where you lived, shaking and shaking, breaking into shards of ungrieved grief, unanswered need.

I will remember how tirelessly, with your son, you worked to help him turn sounds—coming through the implant behind his ear—into speech, speech into understanding.

Everyone will remember how you skipped across the dance floor, waving pastel and magenta scarves, and prayed to angels.

O, dear Zea, your human bones thin as the bones of a sparrow—the way you could fold your body to fit anywhere.

Rest now. You have succeeded.

INTERNAL WIND

When you died, our son became my son; I watch through your eyes and mine how he lifts his whole body into a long accent à droite, arms taut, wrists impossibly rotated back, fingers and toes also pointed back to all the hours, years of practice in turning everything around.

Over the hollow you left, our son stretches his fingers across

frets and strings
in C minor, Bach's Etudes

the way you taught, the way you closed your eyes, nodded, satisfied—our son will remember.

Remember how he watched you deep-breathe into yoga postures?

Now his own focused flow heals what Western doctors call tics, quiets what Eastern doctors call internal wind. Listen how our son calls to his yoga students

what he learned at your knee: Effort brings the rain—

of grace.

When our son and I argue, I feel homeless, divided, until I remember how you and I took turns massaging his neck that ached from its day's staccato singing—

Sometimes I can see his tics as flawless, meticulous, a body expressing itself with perfect diction.

DRIVING DOWN OLD EROS HIGHWAY

Me, in my Q50 with its hot flashes and warning beeps, heading toward Sweet Desire, New Jersey, where my love, soon 70, will woo me with mango, melt the mushy pulp in my mouth—or perhaps he naps.

You, CeeCee, painting the walls pink in the tiny house in Pullman, recently moved in with your old college flame, coming so easily

against his new ceramic hip, just the friction of it. You say your pelvis never quite fit with anyone else, including your soon-to-be-ex-husband of 30 years. Me, with a G-spot suddenly. A rainbow of chaos tunneling through me when his fingers find it and flutter.

And long live the reckless tongue. The old-fashioned clit-kind of climax. Like a young planet rising. Oh, how old and greedy

I am

for that whole-body wave and chill and quiver and release.
You, purposely avoiding that whole-body wave of shiver, as it reminds you of your ex's dogged insistences.

For your 60th, your daughter gifted you with a mini vibrator on a rubber ring for your index finger. A sex-thimble, you joke.

Sex over 60 seems unseemly to talk about, CeeCee, but it seems more ungrateful to say nothing at all.

You and I speak of what our mothers couldn't give us.

Daily I pray at the temple of Venus.

SUMMER SAYS

Pay attention to your heat, your survival—the tree rooted in your garden is a sequined vernacular, a cashmere sweater.

Because nothing matters in the end but comfort and the bending light.

Summer says, I will be the room you die in.
You will dream, neither of regret, nor in the language you were born into.

A stranger will comb your existential threads.
You had thought, for instance, humans were gerunds or harps bent on playing in a diner that serves black coffee and hard donuts.

You ask, What is the past?

What is it all for?

Summer says, The wound of being untaught. Says, hungry.

Says, the cypress is a hospice, says, falter, falter, falter, bloom bloom bloom—too soon a pall will keep you company.

New Poetry by Ricardo Moran: “ABBA-1975” and “On the Street”

TAG EVERY WALL / image by Amalie Flynn

ABBA-1975

Abba's lyrics, like water shot from La Bufadora, mingle with volcanic steam from metallic pots of corn.

And the scrape on my knee from chasing the seagulls bleeds, but does not hurt.

On this Sunday, the ocean breeze slips in gossip between vendor stalls as young men in speedos walk past.
Tables of silver bracelets tap my eyes and ABBA's Spanish melody carries on my tongue before any English syllable ever arrived. Before the summer ended when it tore me from the sands of Ensenada to a desert north of the border, to a land with tongues unfamiliar and stiff.

And now when I fall chasing my shadow, my ABBA lyrics cannot permeate foreign soil. Cannot stop the pain.

On the Street

Run naked through the streets and shout, "Make love to me!"

Tag every wall in a turf war with quotes from the palatero, from the child who yearns for love, from the gay son who hopes his father will welcome him, this time.

With your sharp and fast tongue, mesmerize passersby as they get caught in the gunfire of stanzas and sonnets, popping the air.

Bellow on the street corner of how love abandoned you, how your life is empty, how you aborted your dreams.
And every day it rips into you of every opportunity you threw away.

I want that on the wall.
I want all the pain and hurt to get out of bed, to grab that bullhorn and run naked through the streets.

New Poetry by Michael Carson: “Politics”

BLAME OUR BRUISES / image by Amalie Flynn

Politics

Every 20 years or so boys dress up And kill each other for fun.
It's the way of the wrack of the world
The wind of our imagination and our love.
To blame our costumes for our beauty

Is like to blame our bruises for our blood.
The chime is what drives us, what ticks Our tock forward to the next spree.
The foreshortened humiliation,
The immaculate imprecation,
Is neither what we fear or what we covet.
Man is. Rats are. Take what you can While the day is rough Move lengthwise into the past And blame god for never enough.

New Poetry by Kevin Norwood: “Rabbits in Autumn”

THE LUSHEST GRASS / image by Amalie Flynn

RABBITS IN AUTUMN

Who will find our bones in a thousand years, bleached and brittle under the unyielding sun, scattered in dried grasses by feral dogs or vultures?

Who will hold such curiosities, not knowing that we stopped here to kiss and murmur that our love would outlast the moon and stars?

Who will hold our bones, never to imagine that under the same sun, we once made love on the lushest grass, under a sapphire sky?

In autumn, the fox lies in wait, hearing rustling in the tall grass. Having eaten, the fox moves on.
There are no questions of why, or how, or when.

Smoke rises acrid in the air; the sun sets earlier each day; the grapes shrivel on the vine. Time is the fox; we are the rabbits. Please, hold me.

New Poetry by Joddy Murray: “Aphrodite Urania,” “Chronos After Castrating His Father,” “Grandpa Uranus, Rainmaker,” and “Uranus’ Genital Blood”

WOMB OF FOAM / image by Amalie Flynn

Aphrodite Urania

From a womb of foam I came to be a woman, heavenly gestated from Father, who also brought weather, seasons. He is a castrate and timeless, the bluest of planets.
As a warrior, my courage is to stand by my brother while his hunger weakens him, devouring days, years – his children. My courage is to persevere while the sand under the waves carve portraits of Mother – her power quietly stronger than anything else, ungrounded, unfathomable.

Chronos, After Castrating His Father

The sickle Mom gave me was super sharp, so all I had to do was, like, sneak up on the old man – who always ignores my AWESOMENESS anyway and has so many fucking kids like he's the king of the freakin' universe – get underneath that nasty tunic he wears (with the blood and guts of all the meals he eats but doesn't need to eat cuz he's a God and all), and from behind simply grab 'em, slice, and run like hell. Why did I think this would be a good idea? Just because I hate the man, and the way he treats Mother is shit. But it was easier than I thought. He didn't follow, just shrunk down to the ground where his ball blood was splattered and I could tell as I ran that there would be giants and furies and monsters born out of that blood. I hoped the sea would bury his testicles as I tossed them as far as I could, standing on a cliff, sure that all would be better now and my time here would calm.

Grandpa Uranus, Rainmaker

My grandfather no longer visits with his blued capes that cover everything – his foamy genitals an island for Aphrodite. My name, Urania, is his and my sky is his, the sodden breezes still spray my eyes so I look up. Don't bother charting the skies. Astronomy is family. Look for me when you are angry, I'll kiss your temple and promise you your future and pray to my grandpa, the father of giants and furies and all that I turn from in my shadows.

Uranus' Genital Blood

When my son cut off my testicles and threw them to the sea, I thought about those cherries I left for you in a porcelain bowl by our bed.
His reason, Gaia? You, my darling.
So I'll sire no more children, darken the skies no more, abate the thunderstorms, give the bloodied sickle away and make some Phaeacians as I do.
Time himself, Chronos, betrayed me and I've set a growing hunger in him.

What beauty could come of this or the sea? Beauty itself?

New Poetry by Emily Hyland:

“Rehab Day 1,” “Rehab Day 4,” “Rehab Day 9,” “Rehab Day 11,” and “Rehab Day 19”

THAT PARTICULAR REGION / image by Amalie Flynn

REHAB DAY 1

He hadn't told me, hadn't stopped drinking drank beer in the hallway near recycling where people bring garbage and broken-down boxes he guzzled, and I was here on the other side of the door thinking him sober, reversing redness and the inflammation from an otherwise young and healthy liver and I was sober—

how would it help for me to sip a glass of wine while he drank water with our chicken piccata?

My first thought after drop-off was rebellion to pull the cork from a long glass throat and pour full garnet into stemware

I wanted that right again. In my home the right again to not finish a bottle and know it will still be there in the morning

Then I felt a kind of shame

I checked him into a rehab facility and all I could think of was wine to unleash my desire for want drove hours home like a Christmas-morning kid thrashing through ribbons and crinkled paper so soon as it was in sight enrapt and hungry for vice.

He's been in rehab four days now, four days without hands on my body

how indulgent that every day I've had hands plying my nerves into delight

delight like the tickle and lick of sharing a bed with the same person and when I finally call my dad, my dad who I'd been avoiding telling

I tell him how lonely it was to arrive back home after leaving him there with nurses in their face shields, yellow gowns, and their masks and the globe eyes of his counselor, who stood just back on the sidewalk and my dad says with unintended harshness that he takes back as soon as the truth hits the mouth of his phone: You don't have to tell me that at least he's coming back and I imagine him there alone, barefoot in shorts with a solid color shirt, some sort of mauve, doodling spirals and checker-box patterns at the kitchen table on a yellow legal pad in felt-tipped pen while he talks to me, and I remember how in the month between funeral and stay-at-home, he was well-booked—every day somebody stopped by with a crumb cake. Baked goods multiplied on his countertop: cookies mutated into blondies into muffins into baskets filled mostly with crinkle paper with pears and crackers atop and underneath the suffocation of plastic tied with ribbons. We worked in shifts so he would not be alone, alone where he watched her for months and months and months and months, he danced with her bald in her walker. Oh, how she resisted that walker until she fell over! How there was a friend each day on the calendar for lunch, how we took turns staying the night frying two eggs with toast in the morning—he always ate breakfast—the plate hearkening back to the diner in Waldwick. How he does not have a return.

My call—a child seeking solace from a parent who only understands in the way the child will only know as real in some future hard to materialize in the livingness of abundance and relative youth how he too was young once with a wife who had long hair she permed curly and he would tug on her locks under their blankets. When I say future

I see Jim again, clear-eyed with warm hands playing my rib cage,

The National on in the car as we drive up 95 to some version of our life twenty-four days from right now.

of course the doctor finds a cyst on my left breast uphill from sternum rolling around like a glass marble of course this is the first day he calls of course I cannot tell him this news washed from normal humdrum stress he swims in progress and my secret would not serve him any more than it serves my own malicious asshole cells dense like perennials since puberty of that particular region of course I cannot even examine the terrain of my own human lumps with one arm raised like a branch fingers ambling around suspicion every time I've been terrified I'll find what mom found and it all feels like oatmeal anyhow and he's helpless from there anyhow to distract from my cycle of peering into imagined crystal balls and storylines seeing only the worst, seeing coffins—if he does not know he cannot worry and I cannot put that upon him now make him worry for me while he does so well in there

REHAB DAY 11

It's time to take the IUD out.
This is what I think about today, my body doesn't want this preventer centered anymore.

I remember the day it went in: man-doctor's hand inserting copper I winced. He said I know, I know generic bedside assuaging irked my nerves I sharpened back No, no, you actually don't.

And mom came along for support all frail in her bird limbs, climbed broken into a chair next to me at the outpatient place and pain got to the point I needed her hand to squeeze like citrus pulp out of my grip as something external opened me up—

I want to be opened from the inside instead dragged ragged in the riptide of giving birth—I realized I'd break her frame of softening digits and knuckles of chemo bones if I juiced so I unfelt her skin and took hold of my gown wrung into wrinkles and sweated holes it's only a sheen of thin paper anyway...

When he comes back, he will come back to some levels of absence—and so in turn open space comes back in, to come in like syrup into my hungry self.

His absence heightens hers so this is how I communicate with mom

I feel each breast one by one smushed between a plastic pane and its baseboard goosebumps prickle against machine sounds in a room alone with the rumbling inherited path toward lobular cancer where will my tissue light up a mammogram like a late-summer campfire sparkler?

Today the ultrasound is a shock

The technician skates a roller over my mound and I see with clarity a round black orb

She talks to me lump to lump on the same table she undid her robe years ago except her skin puckered like a citrus punch breast vines weighted by clusters of rotting berries, overripe mine are bright on the doctor's screen netted fibers the rind of a cantaloupe's dry skin

I see roadways toward lactation and roadways toward demise and this marble eye from god like an omen is benign has come out as a reminder of how to spend my days.

Diary*

MY RASPBERRY HEART / image by Amalie Flynn

CLUTCH AND BLESS

my heart is a raspberry juicy yet taut fragile temporal eat it now before it degrades and leaves a tasteless piece of itself

smear'd on the basket.
my raspberry heart lives in the moment but not my gut my gut dreams unpredictable digesting whatever latest bout I've consumed pandemic fear
fear of white supremacists indignation incarceration playacting colonization with real guns on the range
a night in jail to protest police violence hope for change the audacity to hold it all of this roils my gut terribly tangled in the past it's what I ate yesterday and am now transforming to expel in the future my raspberry, my beating heart crush it, suck it through your teeth, and savor

New Poetry by Carol Graser: "Parkinson's Triolet" and

“Summer Isolation”

THE WIDENING FAULT / image by Amalie Flynn

Parkinson's Triolet

I cup the base of your skull, catch precious cells spilling out like salt that seasons your limbs, your unholy lurches I cup the drumbeat of us, mis catch the rhythm, drop plates with a crash You feed pills into the widening fault

My palm on the back of your head catches our precarious marriage, heavy with salt

Summer Isolation

I paint the porch with strokes of blue diamond. By sunset, it's a veranda of green and you have fallen asleep at the shore of a lake that glaciers through your dreams. You wake with stones in your teeth and ice melting under your skin You arrive home with feet delighted by the verdancy at our entrance. We dig holes in the ground, nests for roots the width of thread. You shake ancient drops of water off your bones. When a ruby-throated hummingbird zips past we see it

GRASSES QUIVER BEFORE / image by Amalie Flynn

ABOUT WHAT YOU HAVE

In my dream

Dad, age one hundred twelve, has his first cell phone—big and square,

with a rotary dial.

With a proud index finger he dials my mother,

gets her voice mail.
Together we lean in, listen to her low, drifty voice, its mist so warm on my ear as it rises from deep underground.

I ask Dad for his number, but he can't recall it before fading into the passage. He's left me messages, though, like: When eating fish be careful not to get a bone stuck in your throat; when walking tuck in the tummy; think about what you have,

not about what you don't.

fourteen-year-old mop of hair sullen air in mod raincoat on London sidewalk with beaming scowling father brother seventeen leaning on brick wall in black-and-white flannel shirt no cigarette yet mien

as in movies seen through a puff of smoke college-era long hair akimbo arms eyes narrowed to spot foe in tall grass sixty odd in a museum at a window face a little wooden and through the panes an autumn-leafed tree flames

TO MISSOULA

The cold air her pillow of courage, she skirts the northern rim of the nation.

As she crosses the Dakota Badlands, where even the hardest grasses quiver before earth's uprisings and revolutions, her eastern forest home has tilted and is sliding over the rim!

She pulls her wings in closer to fly fast and low over layers of pink and gray guts squeezed from deep under.

A tail feather tears loose, whirls away;

she almost bursts into a plume of magma.

Night cools into dawn.

She parks the car,

steps out into a new world, a young woman with compass and camera and a crown of mountains.

New Poetry by Suzanne O'Connell: "Airport Luggage Carousel" and "Shipwreck"

IMAGINE GOLD DOUBLOONS / image by Amalie Flynn Airport Luggage Carousel

A battered cardboard box holes punched in the side tied with frayed rope lid popping up plastered with masking tape, wrinkled.

One lone orphan going round and round the luggage carousel, heading nowhere.
Packed in chaos.
Full of soiled clothes bloody Kleenex unpaid bills splinters
and Dear John letters.

This is what the last year has been.

So I imagine the contents differently.
I imagine gold doubloons, a child's drawing of a rainbow, a coupon for a free fried chicken dinner.
Maybe a photograph of a family, at Christmas, standing together on a hillside, everyone wearing red and green, the husband holding a puppy, and Carol,
still alive.

Shipwreck

She sniffed my trenches, turned away from the skin she made, her own thick blood flowing in my waterways.
Me, a vacant dwelling on the shore, wearing swaddling,
drinking low-fat milk.

Oh, wire mother of the soul, entertainer of strangers.
She of too many decibels, too many bright colors, passing macaroons to visitors while I carved "I love Chris" in the dining room table.

Find the fur coat,
find the hairdresser,
find the beach umbrella find the wine coolers find the plants in pots resigned to death.

Little fish swim by her ankles.
Like me, they long for contact.
Mercy, the color of the sea, never granted.
In that day, at that hour, on that wretched beach, she wanted an audience but found only me.

STOMA / image by Amalie Flynn

Remembering Beirut, Halloween '83

The ground beds a stuffed effigy with bulging leaves.
Through peculiar affinity it resembles some soldier.
Notice the guise of these clothes.
Consider its uniform grubbiness. Be a witness.
Here is frailty.

I lug the dumb body as if carrying my own reflection.
In another land some marine is dragging the dead weight of his friend from the steepness of a ditch.
Hear the solstice hour toll? It's the season of reaping soon to be celebrated, full-fledged, on All Saint's.

Jack O' Lanterns gape from their pumpkin infernos.
They tug at my form, a sinewy candle lending motion to dusk.
The moon wears the same face of negligence, staring directly through, perpetual, obsessive.

Skulking beneath it I haul my likeness on a cross of dried corn stalks. In the garden a fire rages.

Leaves crackle, russet, auburn, yellow. Witches burnt pure of skin, the singed autumn embers ascend and I let, with a gasp, my twin fall to be caught.
In stacked grass, the silhouette burns and smolders.

Let flames state metamorphosis, take change from the depths, their swaying shadows.
Let them be purged, untouched by harm and rise fertile from earth to winter the long haul of a death and a grievance.

Tonight something in me was sacrificed but saved by the struggle.

Let it be just an event ritualized for one night and not a sequence, serpentine, leading to another whole era of hell.

Map Pins

& photo opportunities—
A world between say, this President's address & some plane's covert loading. Operation Heartbreak. That's melodrama, effete emotionalism. Stick with facts. Contracts. Point A & Point B, land masses & bodies of water, the planetary typography worn on a polyester shirt. There's import, exports. There's the dollar value status, the stock market resources who happen to be human, each significant as a billboard but not all necessarily advertised.

An after-thought that would seem, the boardroom memo, a game of telephone,

the press (cover)

reports (up) inside leaks (dodge) a thousand pricks (question & answer) of light (the cameras) fastened by (flash) brass tacks

Forced Labor

The long haul is the term for strain.

To go in, sweatshop ore digger, your colony owned by a bigger government who, in turn, is at war with a different one...

Sure, to go in, after the Big A & surrender subsequently:

reality a mirage but for body counts, headaches, the daughter, photosensitive who can't leave darkened rooms & dies

anyway, at 39, her siblings, one female born without bones,

& the next, presently 50 but burying his youngest, such recessive aberrations passed on by their Mom, a Korean import from Japanese mines...

Sound

familiar?

To put bombs behind us, prejudice, an epidemic, look at Bikini Island on film:

the natives packed up, the burned homes, and those natives told, shown diagrams:

"Testing Site. " "You are at war."

Foreign phrases. News to them. The pictures helped while they smiled, waved at cameras none had ever before seen.

Next in came the Navy, understanding perhaps as little, leaving 2 goats shorn and placed in metal crates:
no hemp to chew through or bolting when meters hit red.

To many, in tinted goggles, watching, the blast was:
"Magnificent." "A firecracker". "A sunset."

Others thought it "a let down."

Still, all the votes were not yet in—

There were still those sailors swimming through such liquid marble,

the clean-up crews, the witnesses touching charred Palm, their uniforms Geiger-clicking & their flesh as well, having to shower, be re-tested & wash wash again to get radioactivity off.

The same happened elsewhere, only to town-folk.

This is the humanity within inhumanity, that, in ignorance, we bombed ourselves, & this is the knowledge:
genetics, marrow-solvent, a tunnel pushing to upturn the stone fetuses.

In P.S., another news item my fingers squeeze:

a photo, its caption snatched from the TV page.

"Mushroom Cake, Navy Admirals Blandy, left, & Cowery, assisted by Mrs. Blandy, celebrate first atom bomb test, 1946."

Here's the close-up: two hands, the Blandy's, joined by a knife slicing frosting, the confection rising, a cloud of froth as washed out as Mrs. Blandy's hat.

Here are some facts about

The Great War. It started in 1913.

We know that from books.

and the scarred nobles grandma met in the deli off 23rd and 8th,

Ich hätte gerne eine Bratwurst they'd say, eyes scared red.

It was my fault; I must admit, quanta exist in different places and in different times;

some have been in my brain, and also in Hitler's old brain the war's most famous vet.

Not quite Afghanistan; still, his war and my war was the same,

A vicious trick,

Russian saboteur

made disasters, it's true, walk with me here:

the Soviets invade in 1979.

Great Britain joins France as the Marne collapses, a wet snowdrift, over-heavy in 1914. Add the numbers.

We surround ourselves with stories, these fluid lines always converge.

Remember that line, the human marching through town, shrive-faced, boots laced tight, cap perched on his kiss-me forehead, rifle shouldered, we're gonna beat the Hun—there's another line, now, 451AD,

Attila plundering across the plain, stopped by whom? The Roman? No—

Aetius heads a motley crew of Frank and Gaul, Suebi, Goth and Visigoth, and Saxon! Yes, the Germans saved the West from Hunnic rule!

Until—it always comes around to this,
that boy marched home again some years after the great siege, at Verdun, Ypres, or Somme; really it doesn't matter.

Siege used to mean sit, but he won't;
not without his boots and cap, all that chipper stuff gone, he's been unseated, the siege lifted his mien took on a leaner slant, suspicious eyes for prying words could not prepare a waiting world for what came next.

Plenty! Champagne avec vous on all the quays and ways of Venice, Paris, Bruges; Sur la table, Monsieur?

If you weren't there, you can't know, and he wasn't. All there.

When will war weary of me. Woeful wight, wailing across the width of destiny,

I sprawl comfortless in a rancid hole, a thick cloth great-coat stiff with sweat and grist my second skin, then, for a skull, some tin riddle: helmet, brain-pan, will you sit still?
The unfrozen mud's alive, the stench, strong, rat I'd say, someone's let them in. Writhing, muse for a Rosenberg, a whole den's worth:
and that's a good day, without bullets, bombs, or the whistling artillery storm—the rain of steel shrapnel, cutting like wind across Europe's newly irreligious plain—flesh, it seems, has a its breaking point, splits wide the human spirit spills, squandered, betrayed amid the great gulf between my chilled hand and the quiet, marble hand of German kin; or British, or French—what odd clay. The flesh grieves, parted by that vast, pitted waste, unshrivened the filthy flesh yearns to be whole again; compartmented, sufficient, Unified. one man, one nation—one God.

A great civilizing wind stirs on the plains.

Leaves cast off the towns, like trees, the Supple young men march in step all balled fists, full of boasting oaths they stride, ennobled by a promise of liberation, plunder, and rape.
The best of the land! This lot's the best!
But someone's pulled a cruel prank.
At the front, the sergeant calls time with a note pinned to his back. It reads:
"Take my wife, she's free."
Below, a crude sketch.

On a computer or smartphone, an educated citizen has just checked the market. It's up, cause for optimism, and sun, and a feast fit for all the hounds who prowl our sordid memory, just looking for some sad excuse to get me back out in the fury

New Poem from Jacob Siegel: The Old Gods

The Old Gods (No. 9, 2003)

I.

The towers bloomed up in the dark

Like nails scrolling from dead fingers

While around them a languid curtain fell

In drifts of violet gas that settled on the roofs

All of us honeymooners and mourners

Aware of ourselves as objects in a landscape

That held above the chipped skyline

Bristling in the greater darkness

A dream of New York City

II.

We must have lived inside that dreaming

No more able to escape than words can flee the page

Our old Gods who gave us a magic by which to love

III.

In those days, we could take the D from 59th to 125th in one stop

Or all the way out to Coney Island

Not for the 24 hour pool room where the Russians played snooker a floor above the street

I did not go there with you

One night I had you with nothing between us

You were sat up on a jetty rock

I had the tide at my back

You in the shadow of Astroland

Lit by moon and amusement, a castaway
